“Working together, we can all be part of a positive change movement.”

Everyone has a favorite season. Mine is fall. As the long sultry summer slips away, I am always ready for the cooler days of fall. Many of my best memories and life-changing journeys are associated with fall. My love of fall is about more than reminiscing about old memories; it is also about appreciating the present and looking toward a changing future. Exciting changes for CRCC are ahead.

Looking Toward the Future
The need for rehabilitation counselors is not diminishing; the number of people living with disabilities in the United States continues to increase. In order to meet the demand for rehabilitation counselors, this profession must continue to grow. We all must inspire and recruit new people into our profession.

Now that the CORE/CACREP merger is finalized, rehabilitation counseling is recognized as a specialized practice within the CACREP curriculum standards. There are challenges to this outcome; some training programs grapple with how they will adapt to meet changing program standards. There are also advantages when we align with the broader community of counselors. These alliances can make us stronger as we join forces on shared concerns and interests, while respecting our unique specializations.

After 25 years of dedicated service to the profession, Cindy Chapman resigned her position as the Executive Director (ED). Through a collaborative effort, a new ED was selected, and we are excited to welcome Pam Shlemon to the CRCC team. With Pam at the helm, I am looking forward with excited anticipation. Pam has a dynamic personality, is an experienced networker, and has a long history of moving organizations toward positive outcomes. I expect this will be another year of exciting change as Pam collaborates with the Board of Directors to advance the CRC and the rehabilitation counseling profession.

Anticipating the changing environment and the growing need for rehabilitation counselors, CRCC is implementing new CRC Exam eligibility criteria. The exam will remain rigorous and require demonstrated knowledge within the foundational domains of rehabilitation counseling.

Sincerely,

Stephanie Gotay

MESSAGE FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

“CRCs possess the highest level of education specializing in rehabilitation counseling”

As the 100th anniversary of the rehabilitation counseling profession approaches, I am honored to lead a remarkable organization with a rich history of certifying and supporting dedicated, passionate, and talented rehabilitation counselors.

CRCC has the opportunity to build on its rich history and develop a sustainable future for CRCs. Our future includes expanding our footing by promoting our mission and demonstrating the CRCs’ utility as leaders and problem-solvers. Rehabilitation counselors are experts at focusing on an individual’s strengths to create adaptations, accommodations, and modifications to overcome or manage the personal, social, and/or psychological effects of disabilities on employment and independent living.

CRCC serves as a collective voice for our community, we look forward to fostering partnerships and collaborating on a broader agenda with organizations who share our concern for putting people with disabilities at the forefront of our efforts.

I want to offer my deep gratitude to CRCC’s Board of Directors and Committee members and advisors. We would not be able to continue our work without your efforts.

Recently, we held several focus groups and Executive Think Tank meetings. We are grateful to the many thought leaders who participated and generously provided insights into the current state of the field. Their insight will play a critical role in our forward momentum.

As we look forward to 2019 and beyond, we will announce new initiatives designed to elevate the field of rehabilitation counseling.

Warmest Regards,

Pam Shlemon

The Commission on Rehabilitation Counselor Certification (CRCC) was incorporated in January 1974. CRCC has grown to be the world's largest rehabilitation counseling organization.

The Certified Rehabilitation Counselor (CRC) credentialing process was the first certification mechanism in the counseling and rehabilitation professions in the United States. It is considered to be the most established and reputable credentialing process for these professions.

CRCC has certified over 40,000 qualified rehabilitation counseling professionals. Today, over 15,000 CRCs are practicing in the United States and other countries.

The purpose of the CRC credential is to ensure rehabilitation counselors who hold the CRC the hold the highest level of education related to working with people with disabilities. This expertise includes:

- Professional orientation and ethical practice
- Counseling theories, techniques and evidence-based practice
- Group and family counseling
- Crisis and trauma counseling and interventions
- Medical and psychosocial aspects of chronic illness and disability
- Assessment, occupational analysis, and service implementation
- Career development and job placement
- Demand-side employer engagement
- Community resources and partnerships
- Case management
- Health care and disability management
- Research, methodology, and performance management

This knowledge base helps the CRC demonstrate minimal competencies with the greatest achievement level of positive outcomes for people living with physical, mental, developmental, or emotional disabilities. CRCs work with clients to overcome or manage the personal, social, or psychological effects of disabilities on employment and independent living.

Expanding Opportunities

As the scope of the knowledge and skills needed to effectively work with people with disabilities has broadened, the opportunities for rehabilitation counselors have also increased. CRCs can be found working in a wide variety of practice settings including state vocational rehabilitation (VR) agencies, private practice, insurance companies, medical centers, schools, hospitals, clinics, businesses, and non-profit organizations. Employment of rehabilitation counselors is projected to grow thirteen percent from 2016 to 2026, faster than the average for all occupations. Demand for rehabilitation counselors is expected to grow as people age into disability and needs of groups such as veterans with disabilities and youth with disabilities increase.
Rehabilitation Counseling: A “Best Kept” Secret
The CRC credential is increasingly important as the political and financial challenges of serving people with disabilities expand. The practice and process of providing the highest quality of services for people living with disabilities must be safeguarded!

Raising Public Awareness
Many individuals living with disabilities know little, if anything, about the CRC certification and the significance of receiving services from rehabilitation counselor. While a client may access detailed qualification information about a CPA or lawyer, it may be difficult for them to understand the meaning behind the CRC credential. CRCs are not generalists, they specialize in working with people with disabilities. This specialization is the value of the CRC to the client. Working with a CRC means the client is working with a professional dedicated to meeting the needs of people with disabilities.

The public needs to be made aware of the importance of the CRC.
CRC CERTIFICATION

Role & Function Study

In October of 2017, CRCC updated the specifications for the CRC Exam. In order to accomplish this feat, CRCC commissioned a role and function study.

What is a Role and Function Study?

It is an evidence-based study of the knowledge skills and activities performed within the field of rehabilitation counseling. The study provides empirical data used to update and validate the CRC Exam specifications. The findings of this study inform examination development and validate the knowledge domains used in exam.

CRCC would like to thank Michael J. Leahy, PhD, Fong Chan, PhD, Kanako Iwanaga, PhD, Emre Umucu, PhD, Connie Sung, PhD, Malachy Bishop, PhD, and David Strauser, PhD, for their work on the recently published study, “Empirically Derived Test Specifications for the Certified Rehabilitation Counselor Examination: Revisiting the Essential Competencies of Rehabilitation Counselors.”

“The purpose of the article is to examine the results of the Certified Rehabilitation Counselor (CRC) knowledge validation study conducted in collaboration with CRCC. The research design for the study included both descriptive and ex post facto approaches. Three hundred ninety-four CRCs completed the Knowledge Validation Inventory-Revised (KVI-R) survey. Factor Analysis results revealed six knowledge domains: (a) rehabilitation and mental health counseling, (b) employer engagement and job placement, (c) case management, (d) medical and psychosocial aspects of chronic illness and disability, (e) research methodology and evidence-based practice, and (f) group and family counseling. The findings of the study provided important information for CRCC to examine and develop test and item specifications that will guide future versions of the CRC Exam. The findings also inform the description of the knowledge base underlying the practice of rehabilitation counseling and contribute to further empirical evidence regarding the knowledge domains identified in the replication and extension of the previous study completed in 2012.”

“The findings can also be used to empirically validate the specialty standards for rehabilitation counseling within the current CACREP accreditation requirements.” For more information on this study click here.

WELCOMING NEW CRCs

CRCC would like to welcome the 646 newly-minted CRCs into the CRCC family. We are excited about their future contributions to the rehabilitation counseling field.

Obtaining certification sets you apart from others in this profession. It demonstrates CRC certification possess an advanced level of specialized education and training to understand the medical, vocational, functional and psychosocial needs through a holistic and comprehensive counseling process. CRC adhere to rigid standards of ethical practice and have an ongoing commitment to lifelong learning.

CRCC has shown minimal declines in new applicants over the past few years with the total number of applicants remaining relatively stable as evidenced by the graph above.
The pass rates for first time test takers have remained relatively stable over the past few years. The largest dip was in Fall 2017. It is important to note the Fall 2017 exam was the first implementation of the current examination specification. It is typical to see this type of fluctuation as the new exam is introduced and as test takers adapt to new knowledge domains. CRCC has already seen evidence of and continues to see pass rates rebounding.
RENEWALS

CRCC would also like to acknowledge the 2,424 people who renewed their certification in the past 2 cycles. By renewing your certification, you are demonstrating that you are at the cutting edge of your field and at the forefront of you peers. CRCC has been showing steady renewal numbers.

NEW ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA
MARCH 2020 CRC EXAMINATION

In early 2016, CRCC directed its Standards & Examination Committee to begin a process of reviewing the eligibility criteria for the CRC Exam. Over the course of 24 months, the Committee engaged in a process to seek and review public feedback and created criteria aligning with the contemporary state of the profession of rehabilitation counseling. The new criteria provide pathways for entering the rehabilitation counseling profession and to become certified.

To view the new eligibility criteria click here.
CRCC e-UNIVERSITY celebrated its second year with new courses, more learners, and a major award. CRCC won the Brandon Hall Group Silver Award for Excellence in the Best Use of Section 508 Requirements for Training Programs. The award entries were evaluated by a panel of industry experts. The awards were based on key criteria including fitting the need, design of the program, functionality, innovation, and overall measurable benefits.

“CRCC e-UNIVERSITY allows us to reach CRCs and other rehabilitation counseling professionals who might not otherwise have easy access to continuing education,” said Susan Brown Zahn, PhD, Director of Education. “Our commitment is to support the professional development efforts of our learners. Each new course brings new opportunities to meet those needs.”
CRCC e-UNIVERSITY supports the renewal process for all certificants with continuing education courses focusing on rehabilitation counseling. Since CRCC e-UNIVERSITY launched at the end of July 2016, more than 5,000 learners have enrolled in our online courses. Learners have already completed more than 2,179 courses. Over 10,000 continuing education clock hours have been earned by CRCs and other learners.

CRCC e-UNIVERSITY courses feature trusted content created by CRCs for CRCs. These courses can be completed anywhere and at the learner’s convenience. Featuring a wide variety of topics, the course catalog has grown from 9 to 29 courses. More than 100 hours of continuing education credit is available and new courses are continually added to the catalog.

Learners are asked to evaluate each course they complete. We are pleased to see high ratings associated with the courses. Learner feedback indicated a need for more advanced courses. In response to this feedback, courses designed to meet these continuing education needs have been added to the catalog.
